EDGEWOOD HIGH SCHOOL

Edgewood High School
Ellettsville, Indiana
Volume 6

Here they come.
Some are walking, some are riding,
And some are flying, some just gliding.
Released after years of being kept in hiding
They're climbing up the ladder rung by rung.

Enter the young.
They've learned to think.
More than you think they think.
Not only learned to think, but to care
Not only learned to think, but to dare.

Here they come.
Some with questions, some decisions.
Here they come.
And some with facts and some with visions
Of a place to multiply without the use of divisions
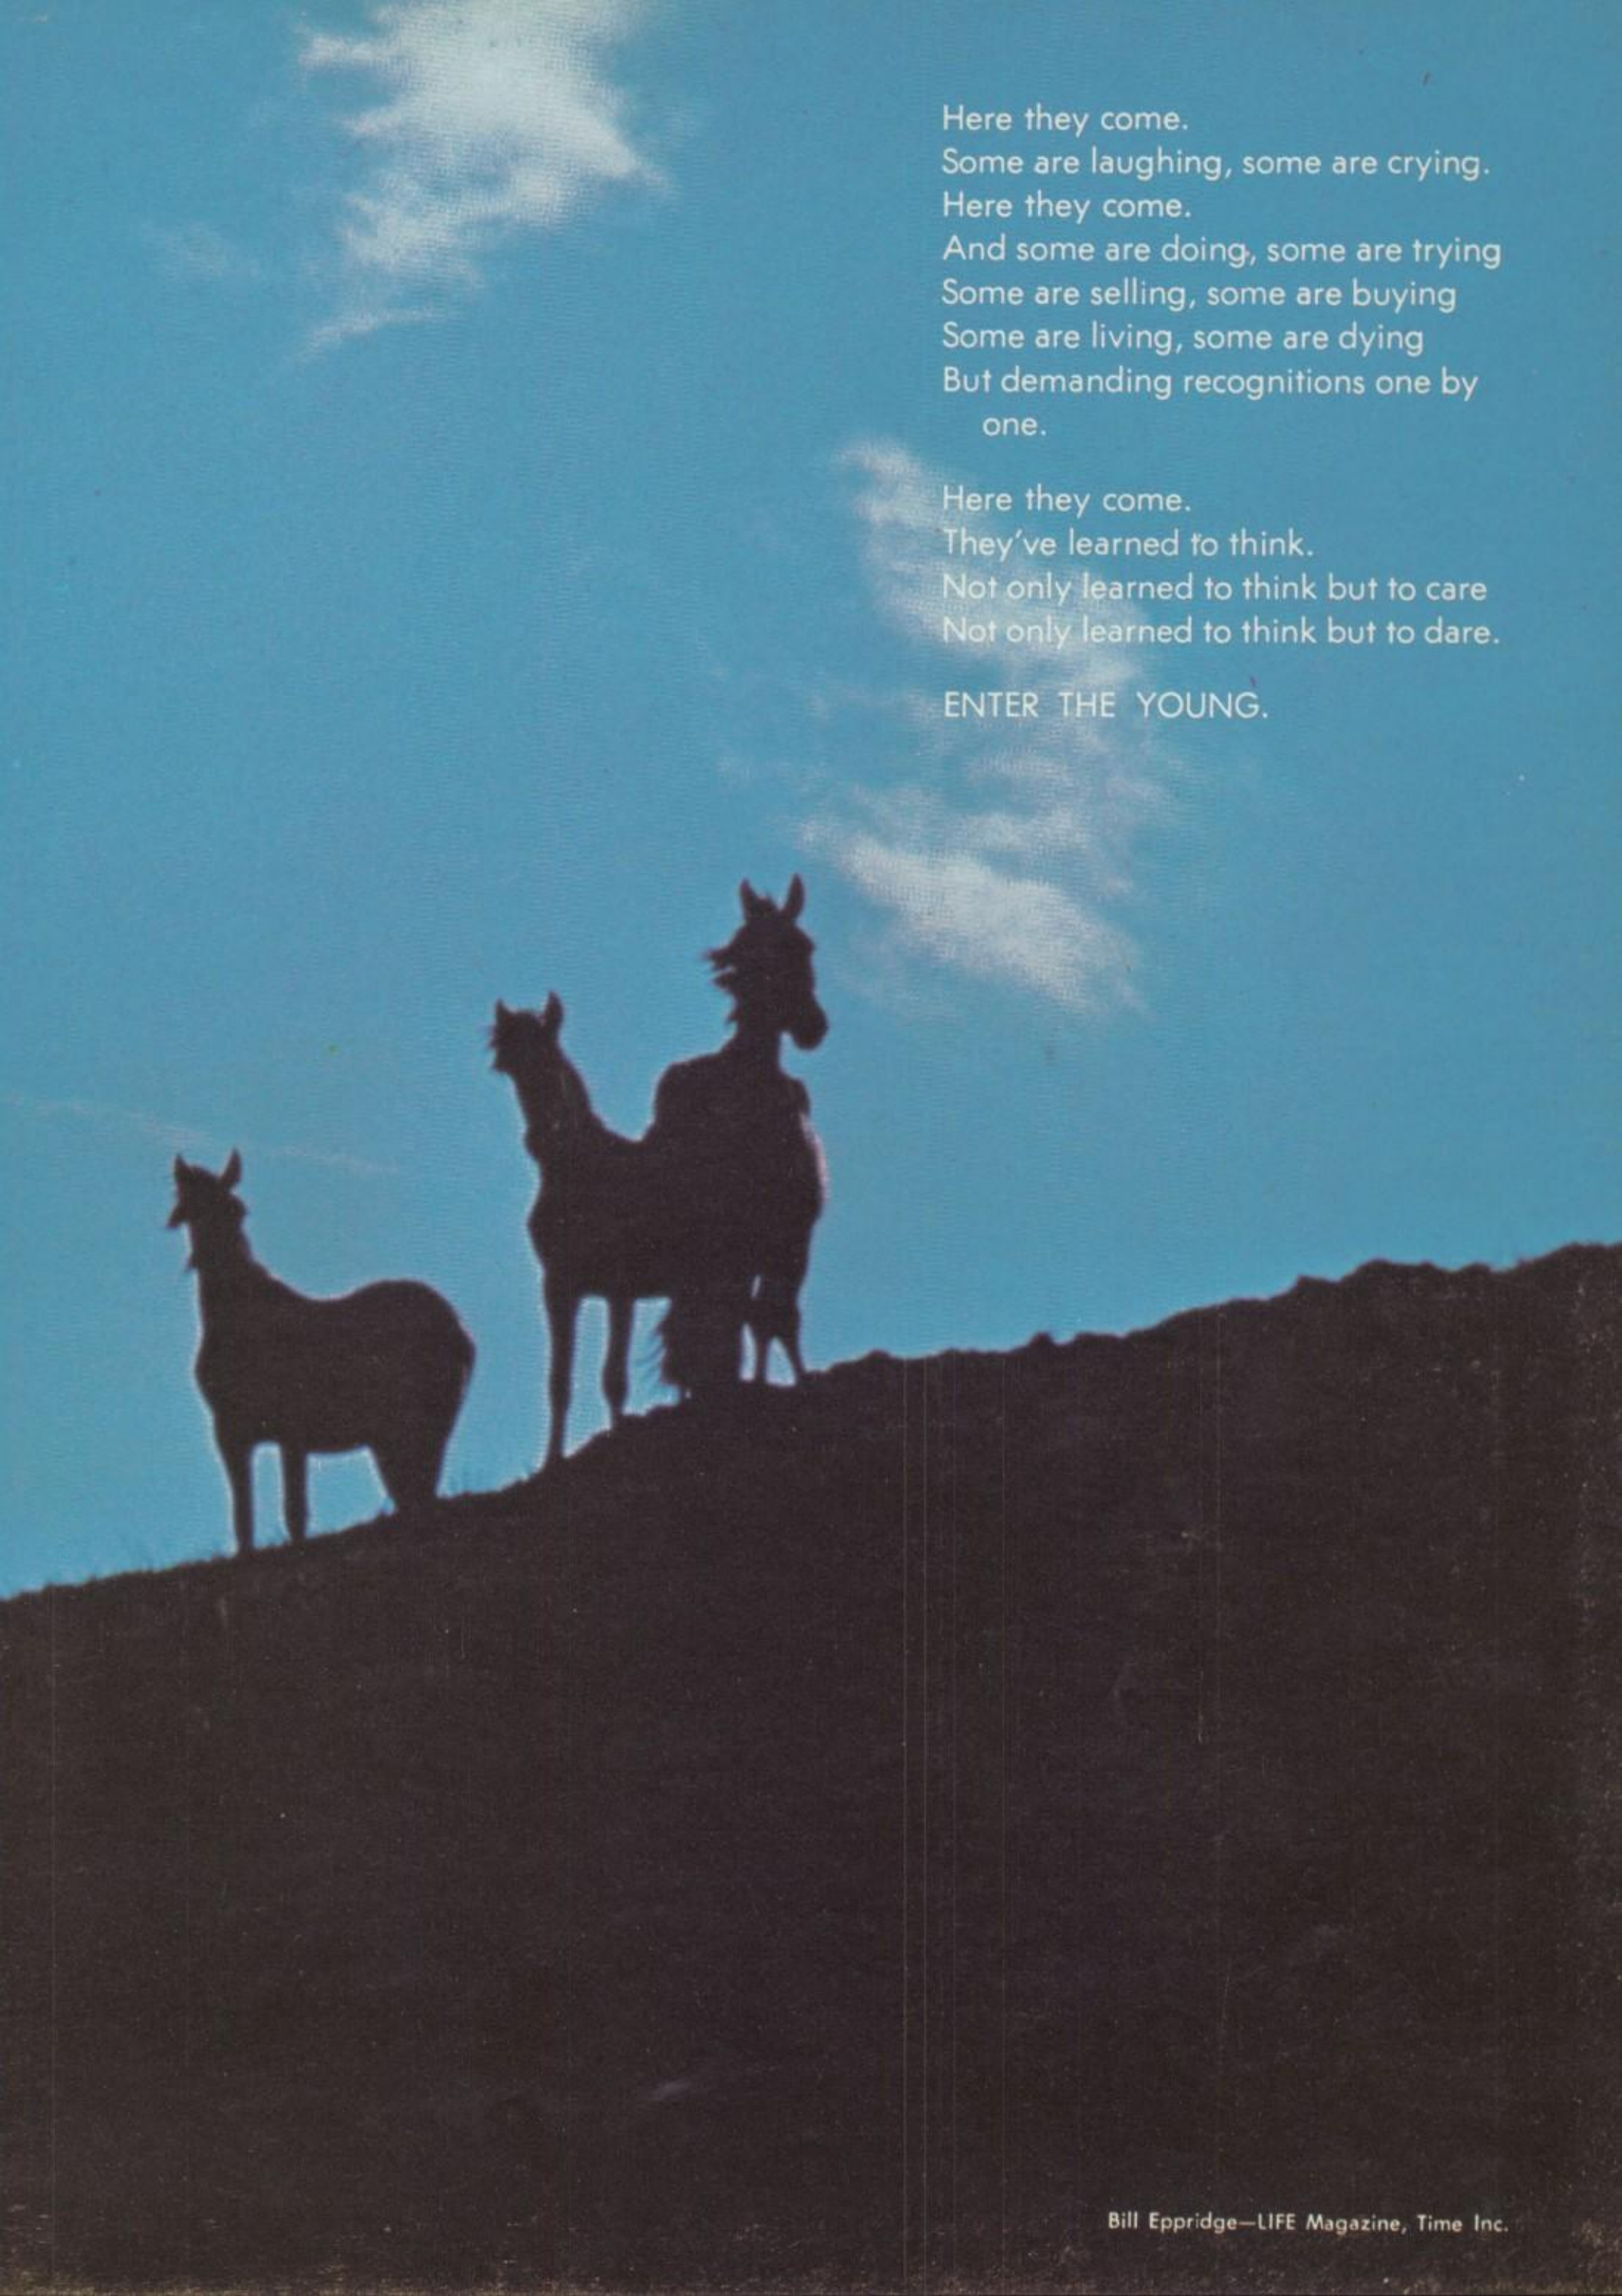
To win a prize that no one's ever won.



Here they come.
Some are laughing, some are crying.
Here they come.
And some are doing, some are trying
Some are selling, some are buying
Some are living, some are dying
But demanding recognitions one by one.

Here they come.
They've learned to think.
Not only learned to think but to care
Not only learned to think but to dare.

ENTER THE YOUNG.

Bill Eppridge—LIFE Magazine, Time Inc.

Students look forward, never knowing just what to expect, but hoping just the same.

Fall of 1969:

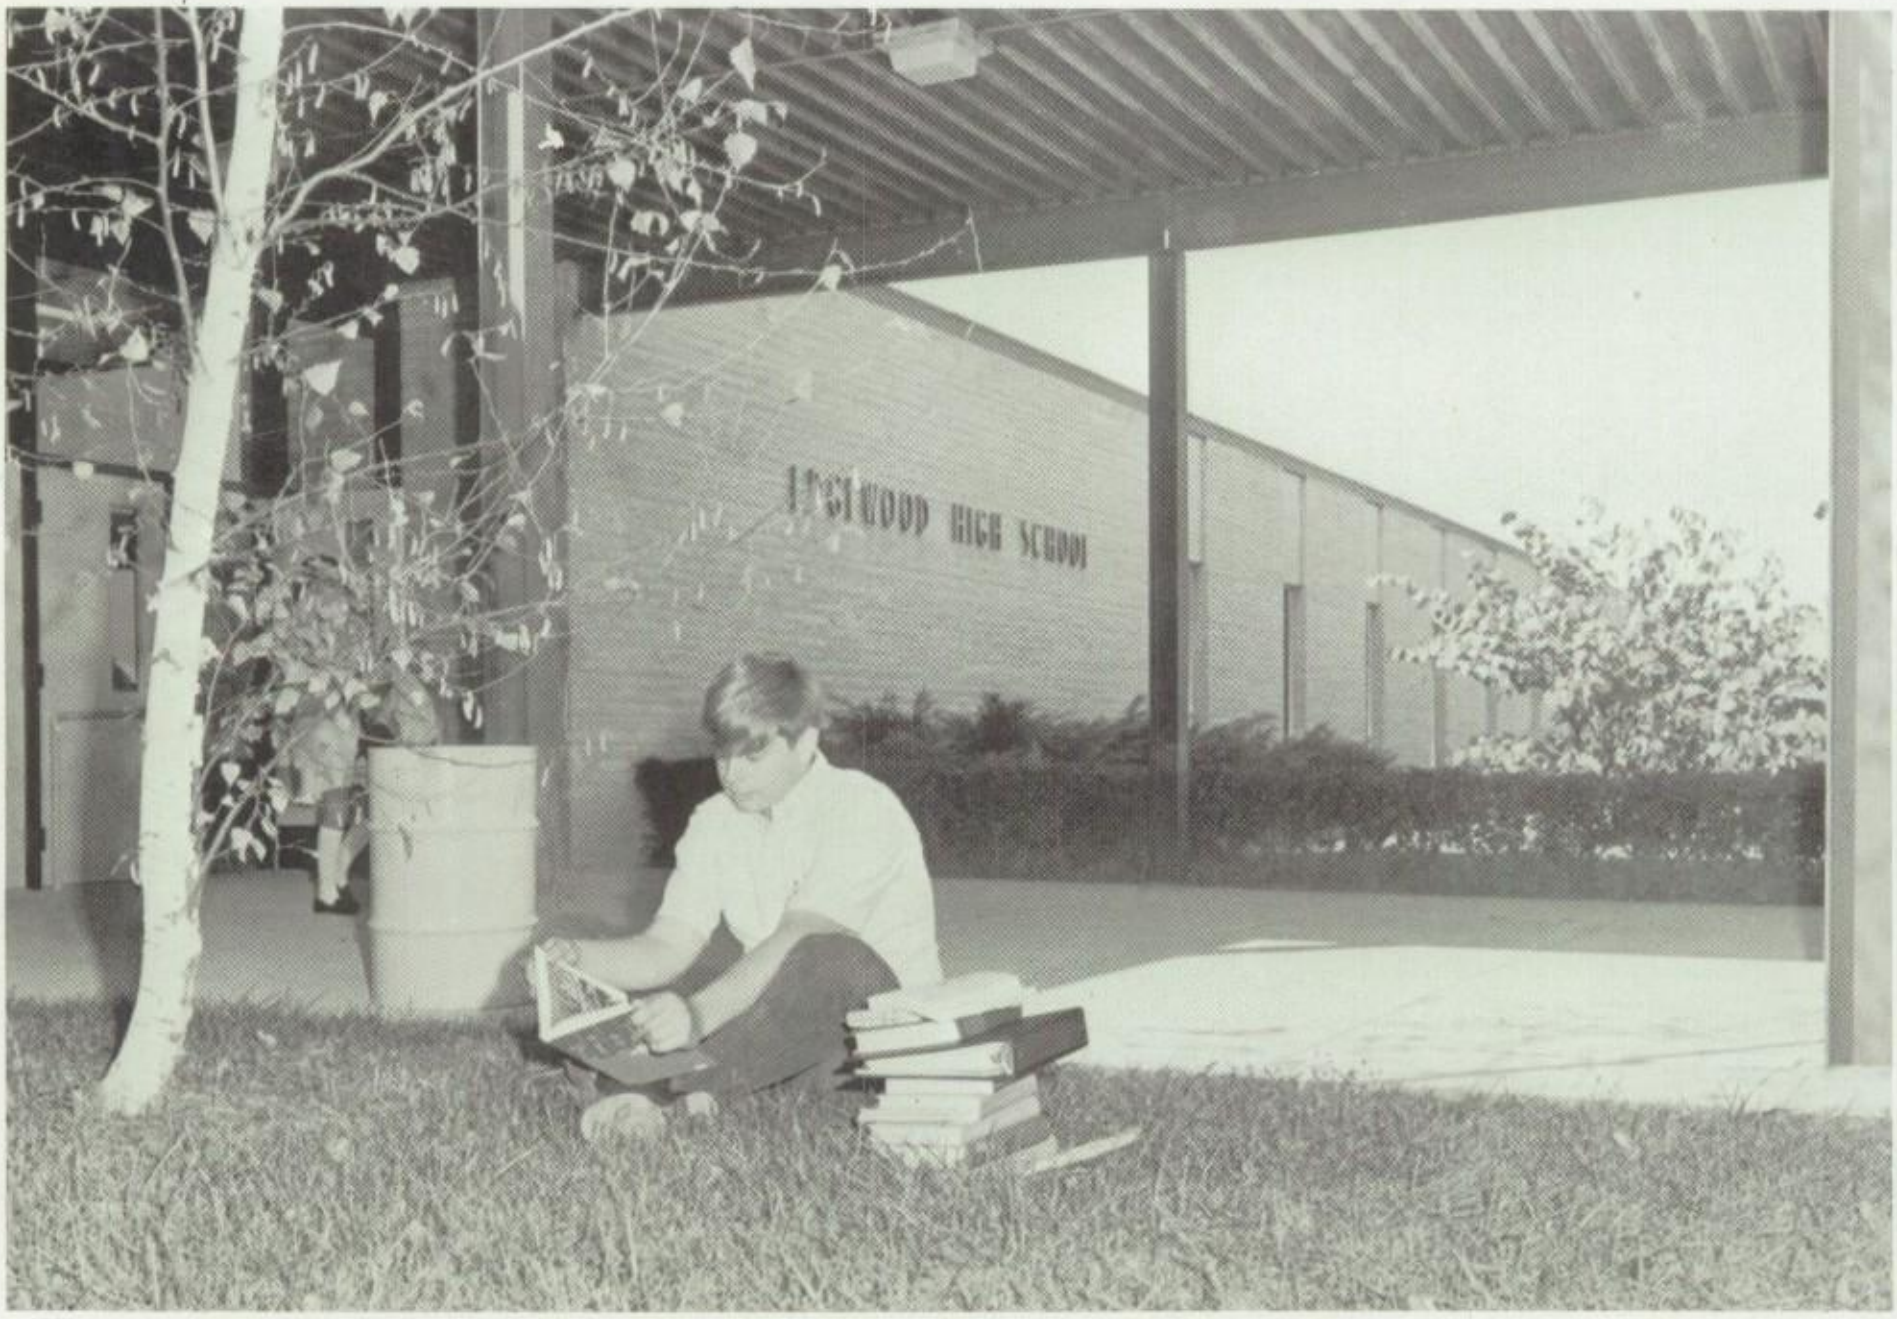
Here they come, the 550 students at Edgewood come to learn; they come to question. "How long can we wear our hair?" "How short can we wear our skirts?" They come to question knowledge. "Why?" "How does it work?" Edgewood has tried to help them find the answer. Math, music, language, and even the home economics departments have expanded to give students an in-depth view, necessary to understand the technical world of today. E.H.S. tried to help practically as well as academically.

Students of today mean big business. Clothes, food, cosmetics, and most of all accessories are geared to the young market. Distributive education helps them to see how business works in action, and how they can learn and profit through experience.

They have made their own styles and enjoy them for both conformity and individuality.

Here they come, with oversized glasses, girls with elaborate hosiery, boys with no socks at all. Here they come with their own ideas, their own questions, trying to find their own answers.

"ENTER THE YOUNG"



Searching for knowledge, Steve Anderson finds an unusual but effective place for study.

Brad Compton looks hopefully into the Hoofbeat box, a way for students to communicate how they feel about their school life.

Local fire officials and trucks stood by as shouting fans and excited cheerleaders set ablaze an effigy of "Mr. Univee" in the opening night activities of Edgewood High School's third annual Homecoming. Seniors carved a notch on the spirit stick for their giant wood stack, the biggest of four class entries.

Freshmen turned the tables the next night when they claimed first place for the best float in the pre-game parade. Half-time was the scene of more doings, for Peggy Shepherd received the 1969 Homecoming crown from Principal Thomas McConnell. Her court included Sandy Curry, Marsha Ledgerwood, Marcia Wood, and Linda Worstall.

Spirits were dampened temporarily as the Univees defeated the Mustangs, but they were quickly revived at the after game dance in the cafeteria.

Peggy Shepherd, 1969-70 Homecoming Queen, is crowned by Mr. McConnell during pre-game festivities.

An Air of Magic Presided Over '69 Prom

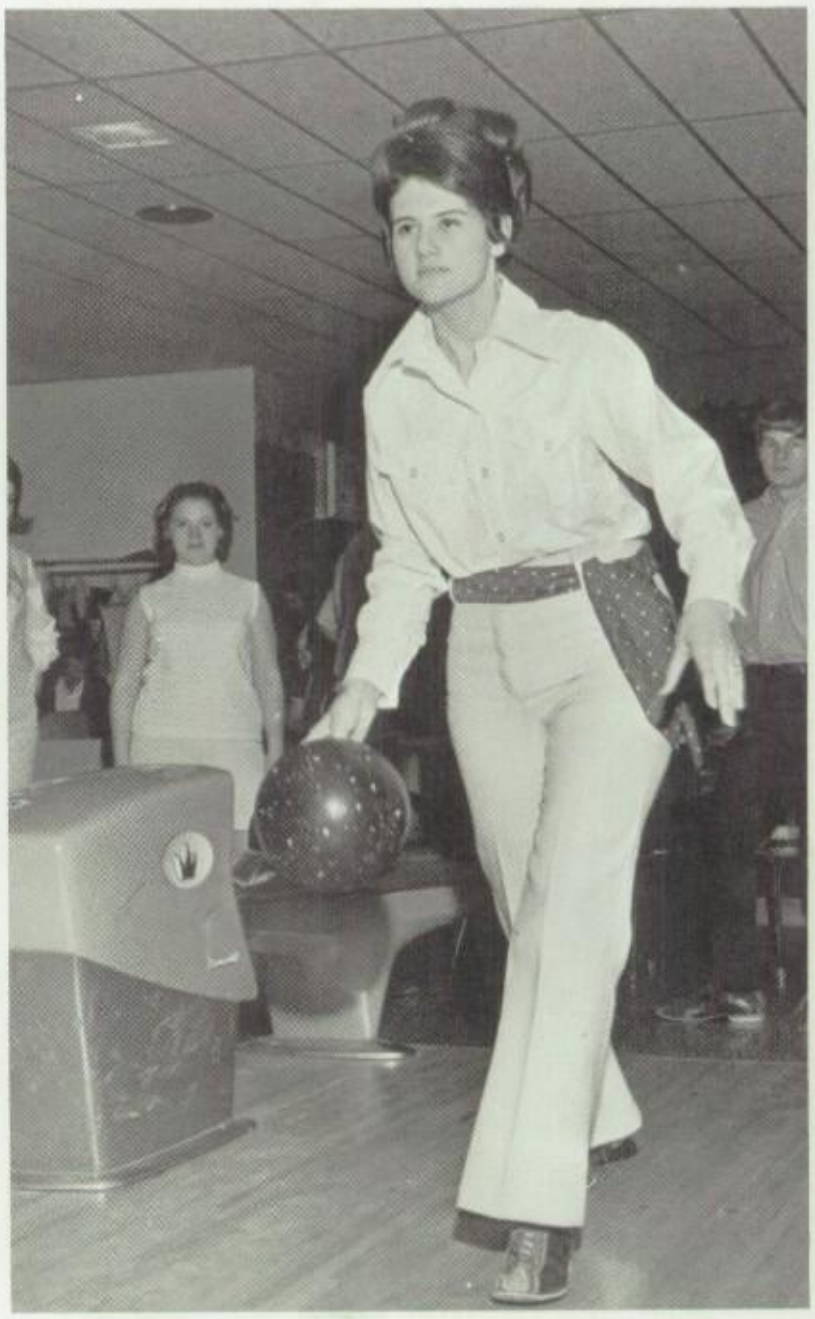
Lovely Annamae Hayes, escorted by George Ferrell, reigns over the 1969 Prom.

"This Magic Moment" was the theme and the mood of the 1969 Junior-Senior Prom. Multi-colored flowers, a sparkling fountain, and vases of blue tinted carnations completed the evening's decorations in the Solarium and Alumni Hall on the Indiana University Campus.

During the evening, five senior girls chosen as Prom Queen candidates were escorted to the stage. Annamae Hayes received the 1969 Crown and a dozen roses. A tearfully happy Queen led the next dance, played just for her and her escort.

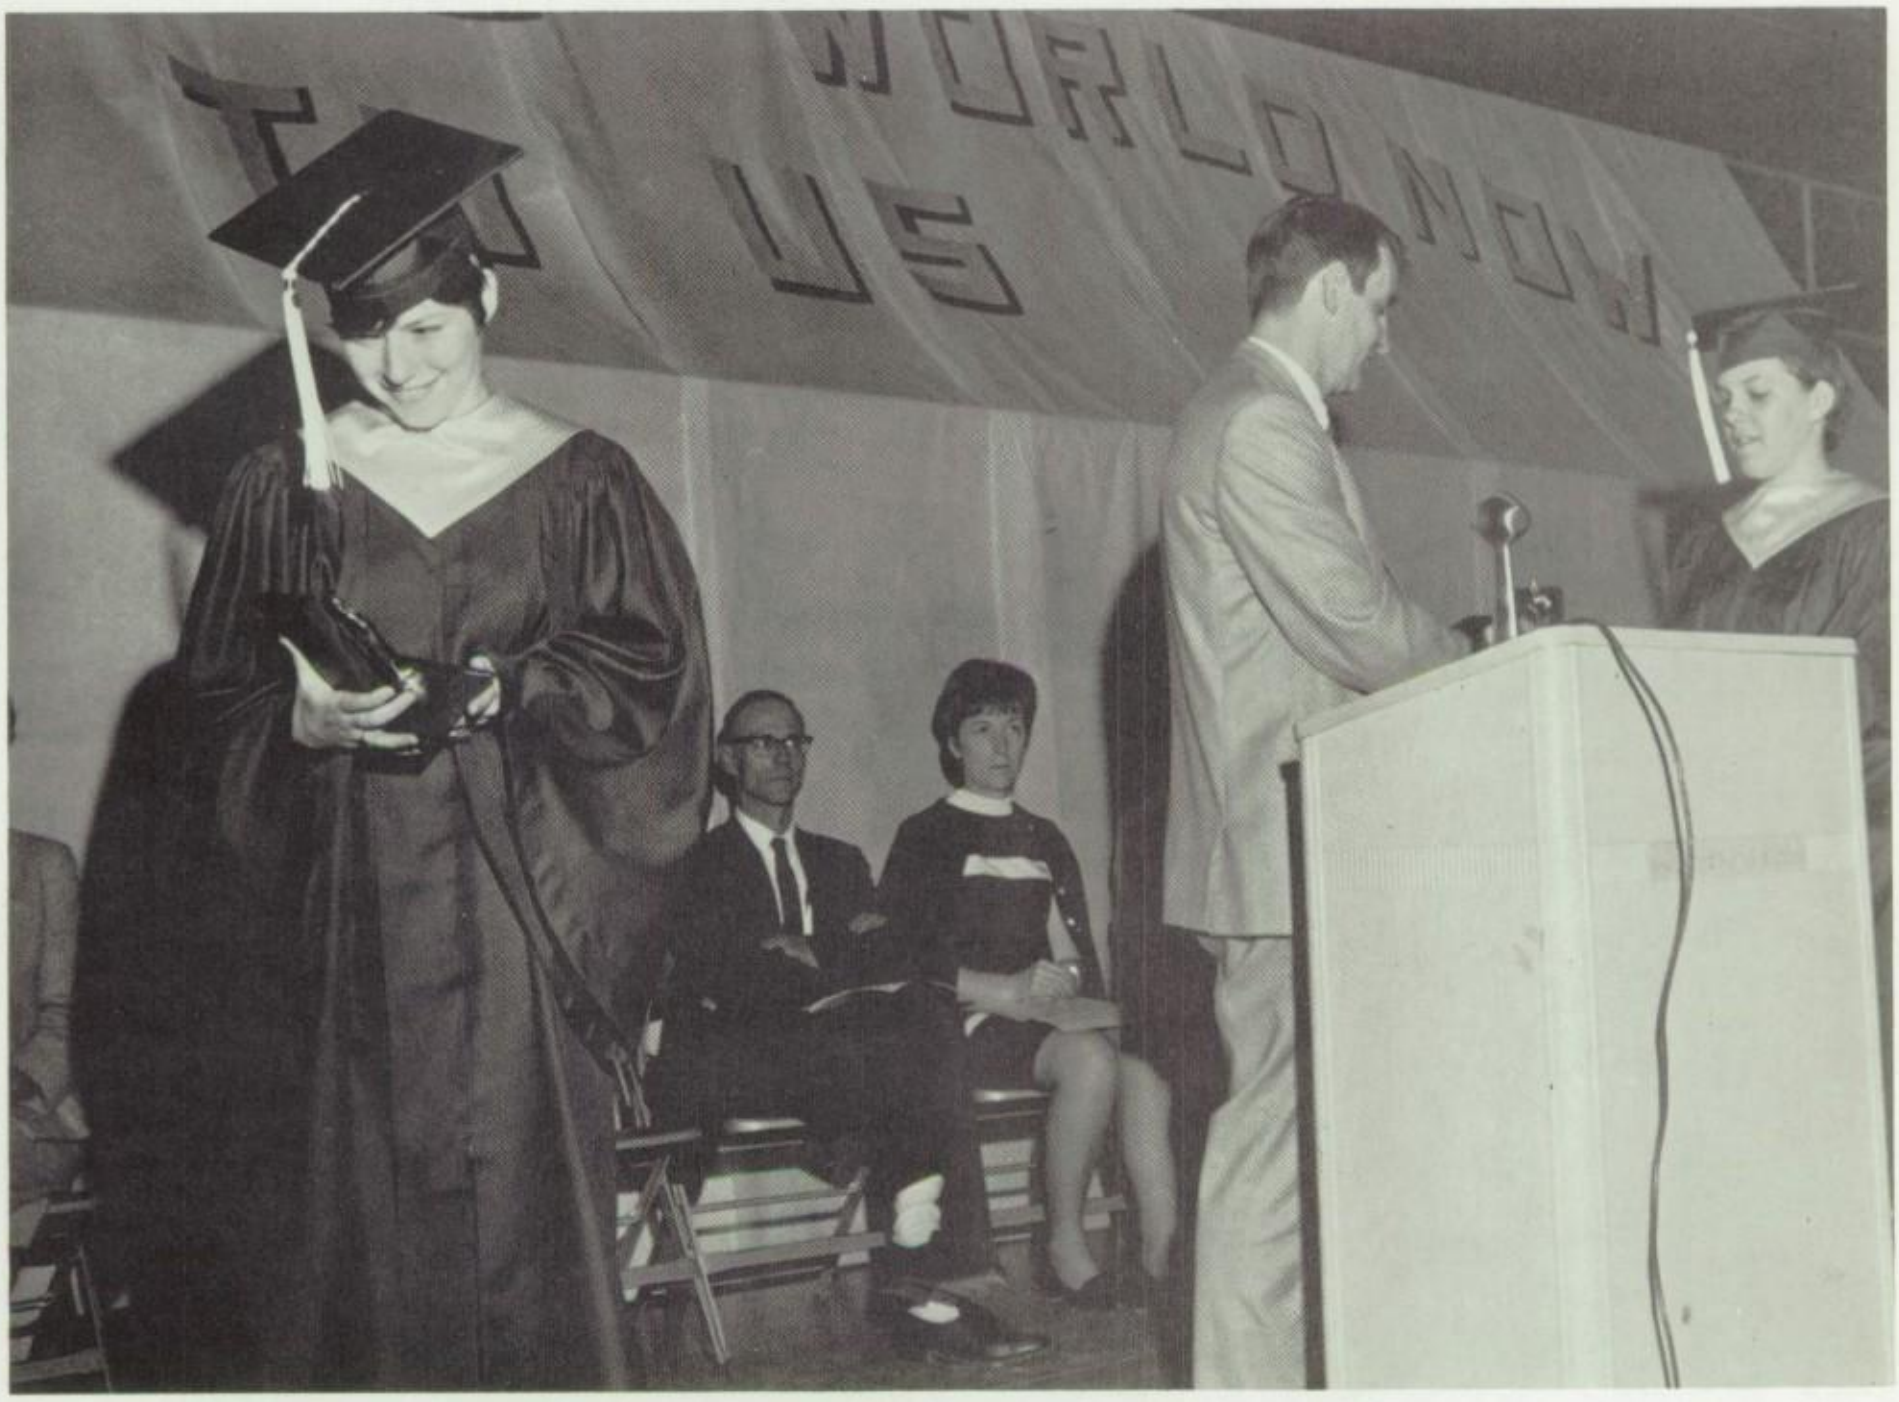
Following the prom, shorts and T-shirts replaced formals and tuxedos. The Grey provided the music to dance to, bowl by, or eat with. Those brave enough to stay up the rest of the night enjoyed breakfast in the student center, and were rewarded by various types of door prizes.

"Don't look now Sharon, but . . ."



Bowling is one of the activities enjoyed by Kathy Maxwell at the after-prom.

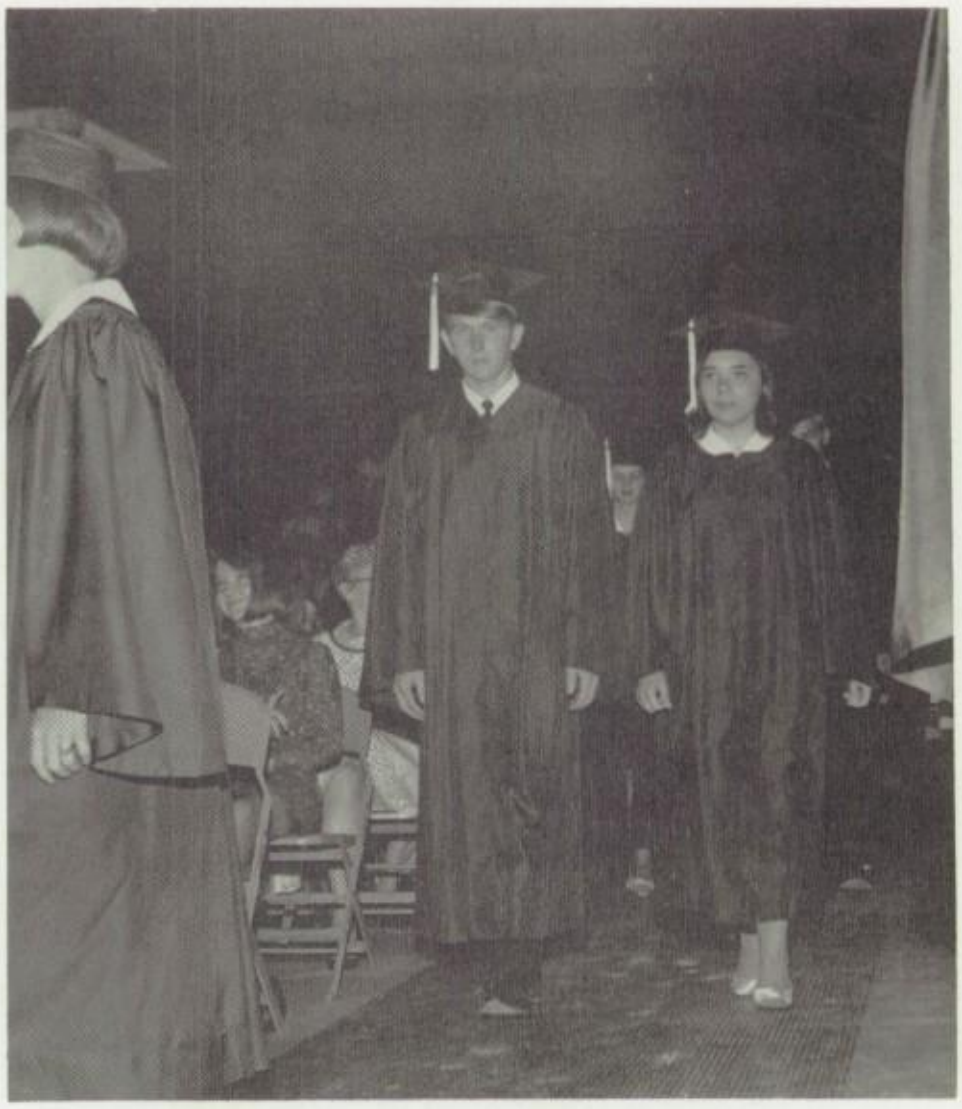
Class of '69 Graduates Eighty-Seven



Salutatorian Beth Roberts and Valedictorian Beverly Scaggs receive awards from Mr. Laws, Principal.

Senior week was when this graduation became real—when 87 seniors could let themselves believe that they were finally going to make it. Restrictions were relaxed when senior picnics, senior teachers, and seniors in every kind of attire were common-place. Throughout this week of fun, maroon robes draped over senior lockers were silent tributes and reminders of the solemnity of the approaching occasion.

The week climaxed with baccalaureate and commencement exercises on May 25. Linda Worstall and Terry Innis, juniors, traced the steps they would take in 1970 as they led the class of '69 through their last steps as students. Beverly Scaggs and Beth Roberts challenged their classmates as they delivered the Valedictorian and Salutatorian speeches. Many tearful seniors returned to their seats after pink and white carnations were pinned on parents. Mr. Laws, Principal, awarded diplomas, tassels changed sides, and the new graduates went their ways, with congratulations still ringing in their ears.



Seniors of '69 make their last trek on graduation day.

Academic

With the after school activities, athletic events, dances, and parties it might be easy to assume that a student's life is one of leisure and fun. Any Edgewood student would be the first to say that this is not entirely the case. These activities make school more interesting but the main thing on a student's mind are grades, tests, and semester averages. Students spend the largest part of their time in class studying, at home studying, resting from studying, and getting ready to study.

An expanded curriculum broadened the areas for students to study in depth. The Home Ec. Department added a new course for advanced cooking and tailoring, the Math Department added a fifth year so mathematicians to be could sample calculus and trigonometry, and the Music Department started a music theory class to help students who plan a major in music in college. Besides the expanded areas there were also new areas for this year's business oriented students. Distributive Education gave students the chance to work while going to school providing practical experience with learned knowledge.

But most important is the student's process of learning to think; to use what they gain from the classroom. Edgewood students are learning to think both in the classroom and out, constructively and with imagination.

"They've Learned To Think More Than You Think They Think . . ."

College English Becomes Fou

Rick Neilsen and Mr. Anderson scramble for the balls at the beginning of the Student-faculty dodgeball game.

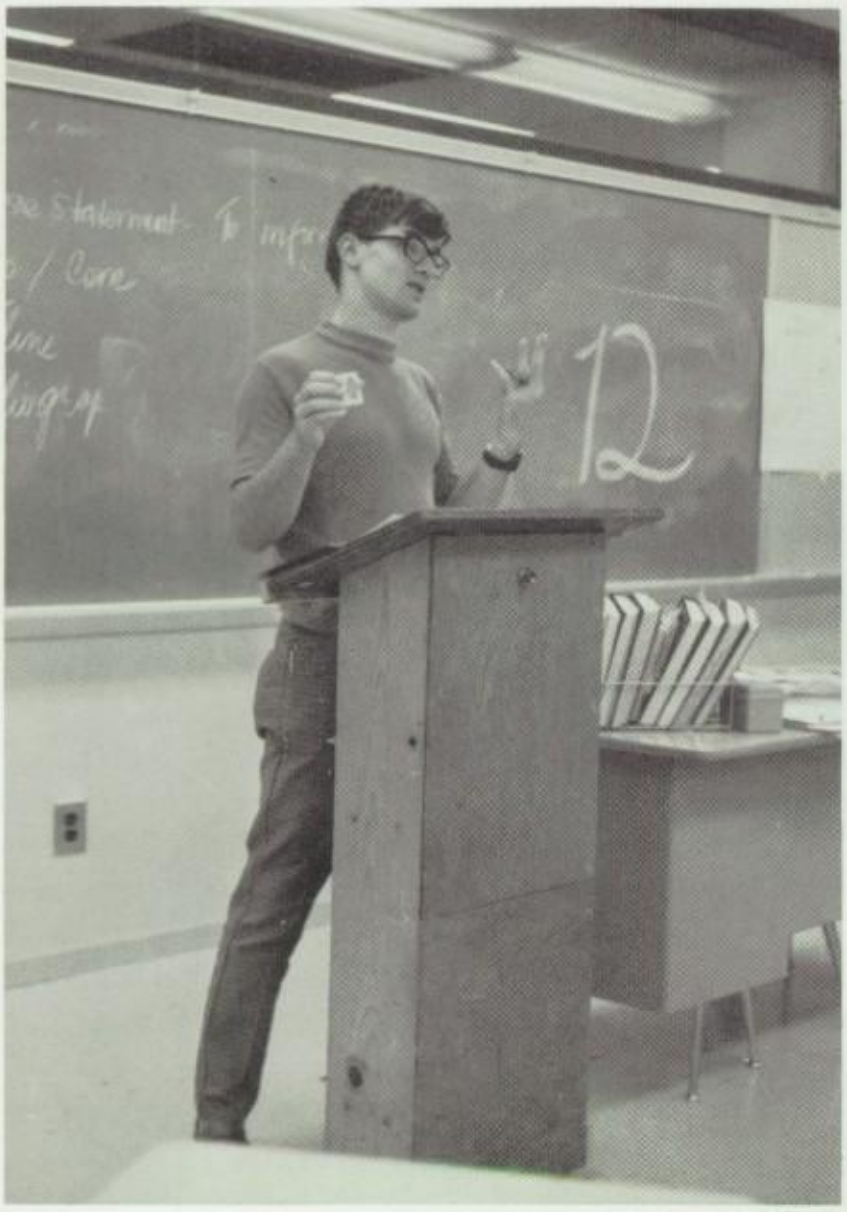
The largest department in Edgewood, as in any school, is the English Department. It was here that students learned the proper use of English in both speaking and writing. Speech, Drama, and Journalism played an important part in the program. Learning to speak before a group, and being able to express ideas soon became a part of the classroom agenda. Application of writing skills and reporting was demonstrated by the Journalism class, which published the Hoofbeat, the school paper. All was not work for these classes though. Pantomines and dramatic monologues challenged the imagination and creativity of the drama and speech classes, where situation pantomines put students in trapped elevators and lion cages.

The Hoofbeat staff challenged the faculty to dodgeball during one Friday homeroom period. The faculty put up a good fight, but were totally defeated, to the delight of the student body. English book reports, Literature assignments, and sentence diagramming took up the rest of the English students' time as they learned to express themselves in the best possible way.

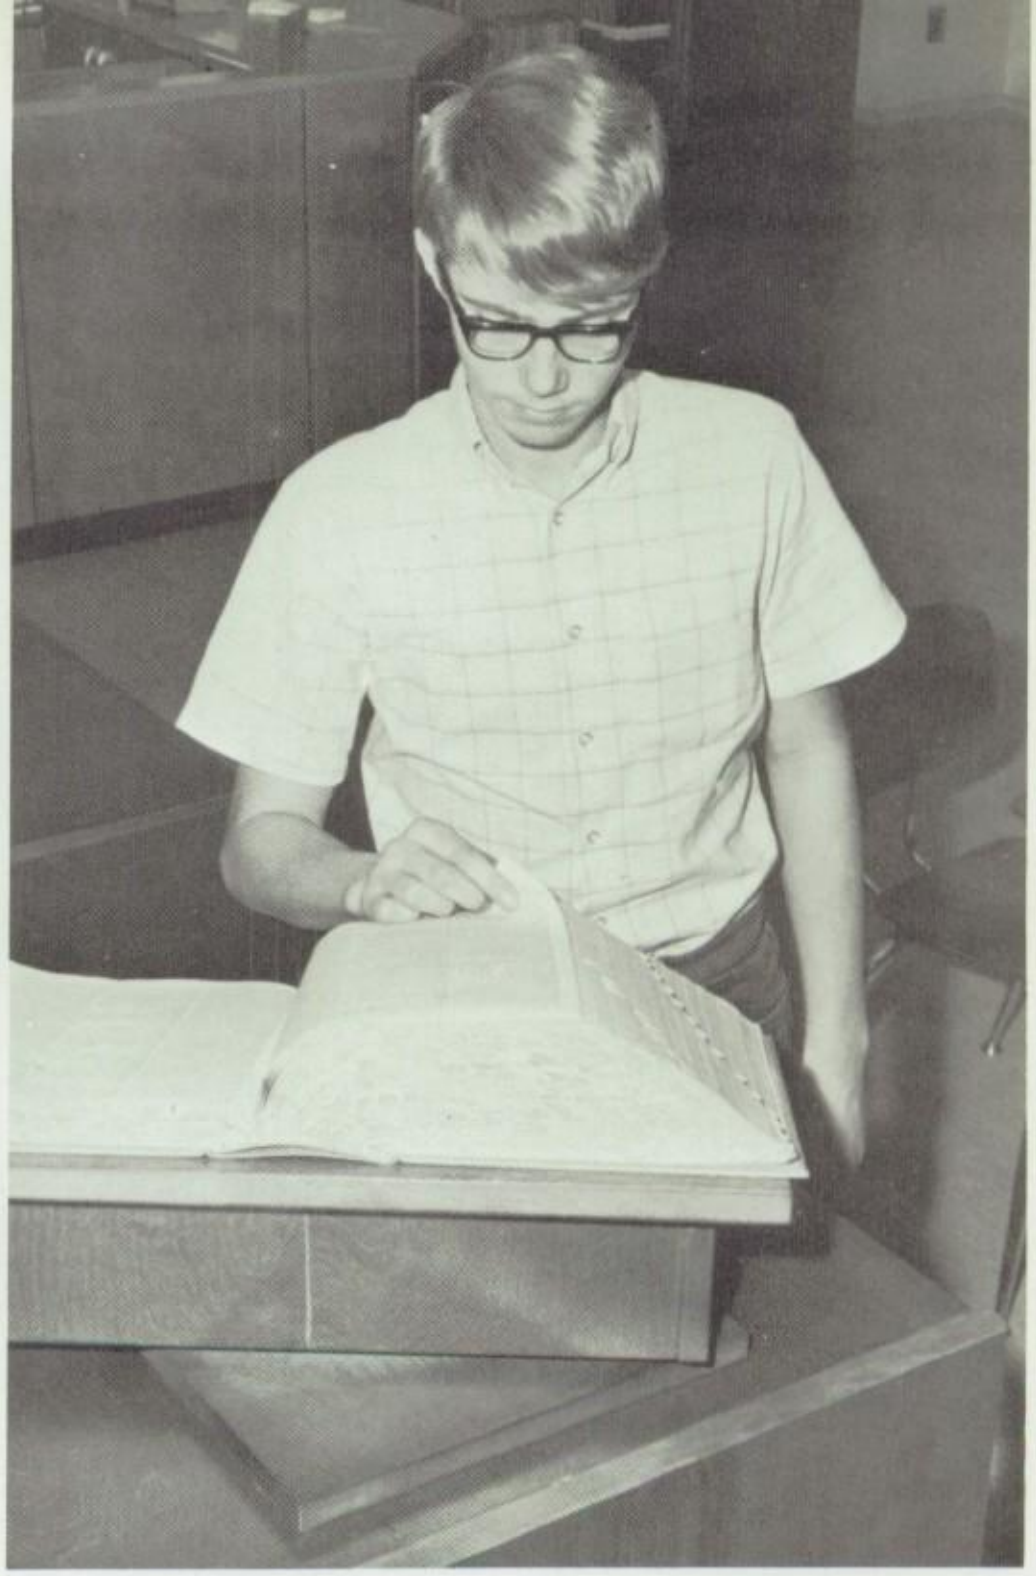
Clever signs that announce the coming of the Hoofbeat are taped in place by Julia Harmon and Kathy Hendricks.

Debating over the length of a story, Carol Leffler and Sue Dillman pause to confer over an article.

Year Program

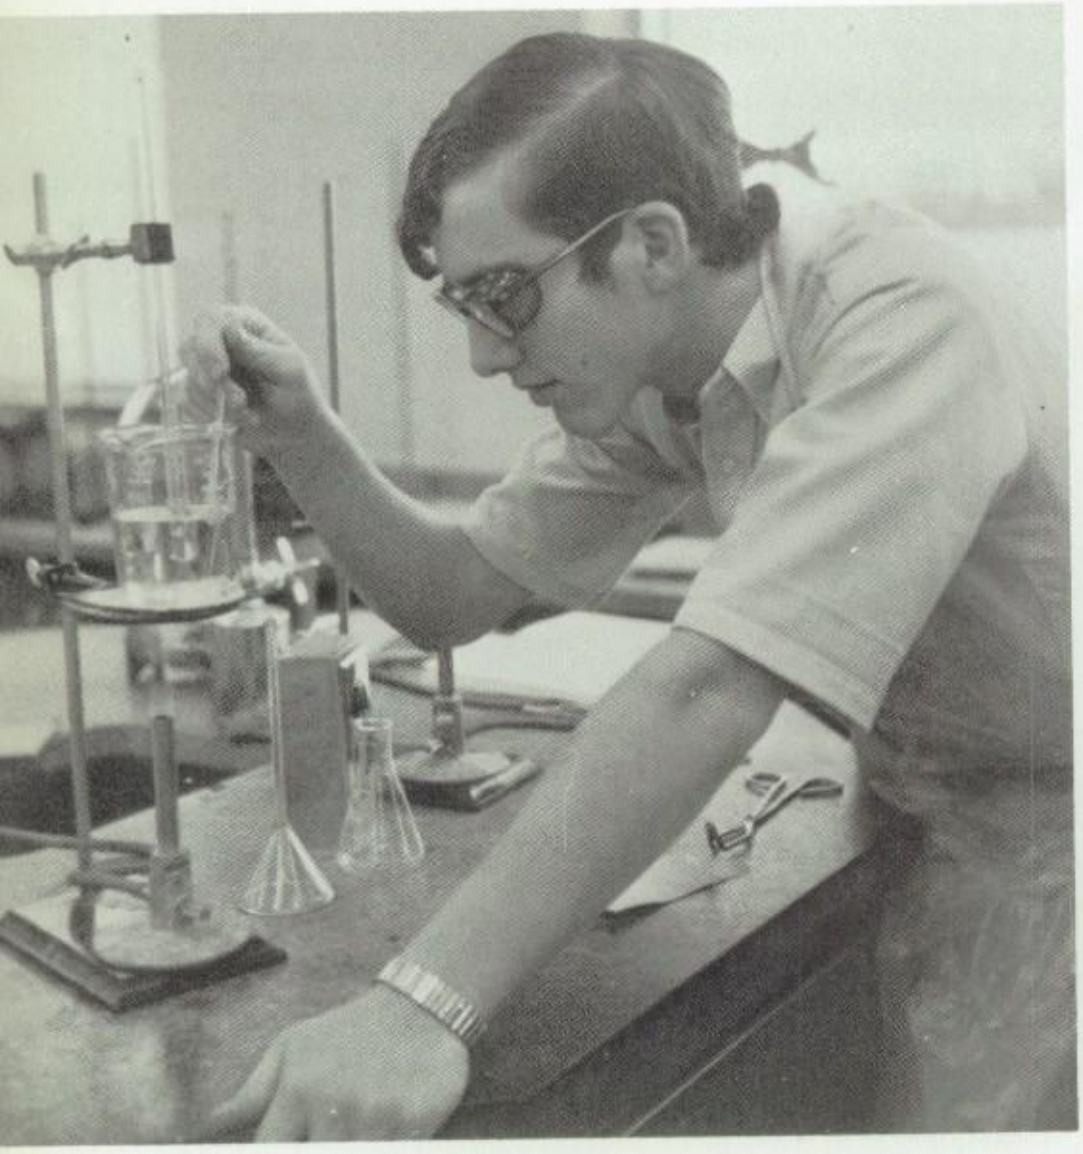


Coin collecting proves an interesting topic for Robbie Taylor's speech.



Mike Bennett finds that the library's unabridged dictionary contains more information than the small classroom dictionaries.

Mrs. Durkott helps Galen Swartzentruber and Steve Rumple to find background material through use of the Reader's Guide.



Stirring the solution, Joel Kordis keeps an eye on the thermometer in a chemistry lab.

Patty Baynes and Barbara White assemble their apparatus.

Science Fair Rounds Off Year for Dept.

The complexity of the smallest creatures can be better understood through dissection, and the Biology classes found that besides the usual frogs, crayfish, earthworms, and grasshoppers this year's classes also studies starfish, fetal pigs, and sharks.

Physical Science and Chemistry students found their best thinking was necessary in carrying out and evaluating the involved procedures in laboratory work. Atom structure, atomic weights, and valences proved to be only a small portion of the memorization work needed to do well in classes.

Senior students with the necessary math background explored the area of Physics, Pendulums, centers of gravity, levers, and pulleys found their way into classroom discussion.

The science classes produced projects which were exhibited to the public at the annual Science Fair on March 26. They ranged anywhere from the study of plants and animals to earth and space.

A few outstanding projects went to the Regional Science Fair held in Bloomington at the I.U. Memorial Union Building.

Cheryl Kuster checks to see if ring is cool before removing it from the stand.

Mathematicians Encounter New Course

Edgewood's math department offered courses encompassing everything from simple addition and multiplication to quadratic equations and trigonometry. The first year students chose from two basic courses: general math or Algebra I. As the Edgewood students progressed in their knowledge, they traveled on to geometry and Algebra II, finally ending with the advanced math courses.

Better and more competent mathematicians are in demand in today's highly computerized society, and this year Edgewood expanded its department to meet this need by adding a fifth year math course to the curriculum. The fifth year introduced students to calculus, analytic geometry, coordinate geometry, statistics, and other odds and ends not covered in the previous four years of experience.

Mrs. Black gives Troy Koon some useful help.

Bill Graham discusses with Mr. Cazzell the trip he won because of his coverage of Malasia during L.U.N.A.

Mr. Miller personally assists John Mayrose with his U.S. History studies.

Social Studies Classes Host L.U.N.A.

Mr. Tate helps Lynn Wagner and Janet Skirvin to better understand Freshman Civics.

The study of History, Psychology, Sociology, Government, Civics, and Economics are no longer limited to mere textbook and their problems. American History and World History students discussed not only things from the past, but also current events, including such topics as the new draft lottery, the war in Vietnam, inflation, and even the pros and cons of segregation. With Time magazine, income tax exercises and advertising education, seniors became acquainted with world problems in Government and Economics.

An outgrowth of this interest, the Social Studies Department hosted the Little United Nations Assembly. On January 31, 350 students from E.H.S. and the surrounding area schools represented countries from all around the world in this mock assembly.

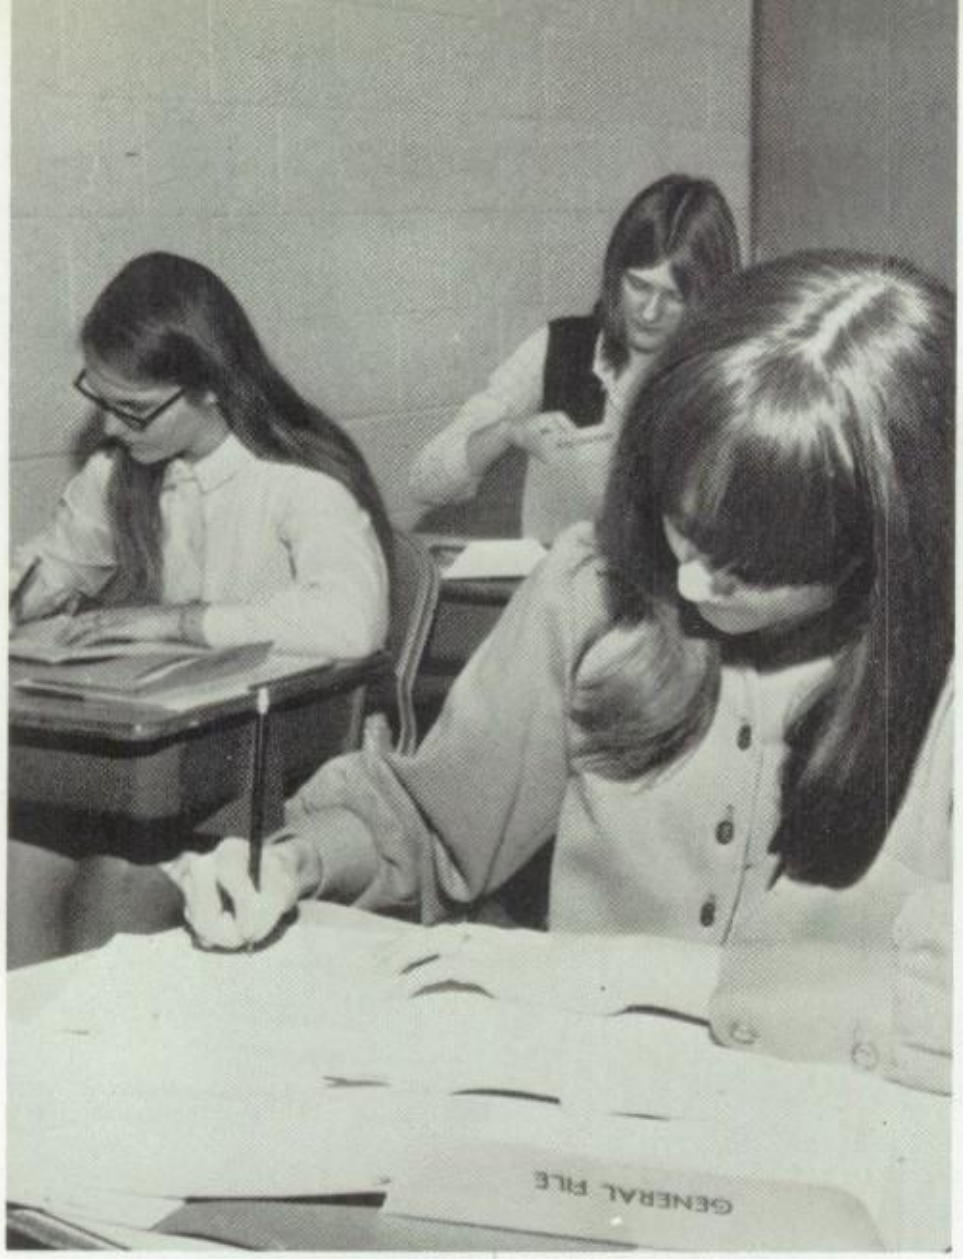
Expansions Take Place in Language Dept.

Visitors to Edgewood might have wondered what the strange noises coming from the language lab might have been. However, it was simply the Spanish students rolling their R's, the French students practicing vowels, the German students developing the short, direct words.

German was an addition to the Foreign language curriculum this year, and the classes not only did interesting things in the classroom, but went a step further to present a Christmas convocation for the student body about the traditional holiday celebration.

Mrs. Meagher helps students from her control panel.

Students listen to the foreign language tapes during lab session.



Bookkeeping skills take much time and patience.

D.E. Added to Business Dept.

Classroom study was combined with actual on the job experience when a select number of seniors were chosen to participate in the Distributive Education program, a new addition to the business department. Leaving at noon, these selected few drove off to their respective jobs in the surrounding areas.

Edgewoods beginning typists found that learning the keyboard is not a difficult task; it's learning to type it correctly without peeking at the keys that presents the problem. What first appeared as chicken tracks turned into meaningful words as shorthand students became more adept at reading them. Figures and ten cent column mistakes frustrated many bookkeeping students, while those who mastered the skills advanced to calculators, dictaphones, and transcribing machines in secretarial practice.

Concentration during a timed writing is very important in typing.

Sculpturing stone is a challenge for Charles Norton and Tom Doyle.

Mrs. Ahlemeyer and Steve Campbell discuss the things that can be done from a piece of wood.

Art Class Stresses Individuality

This year with Mrs. Ahlemeyer and Mr. Barnhill, many different medias were available to the individual. Each student was allowed to pick his own particiular field of interest and complete projects in this one area. There were wire sculptures, three dimensional space problems, constructed from straws or toothpicks, work with metal and enameling, and abstract or pictorial nature pictures made from bark, rice, stone, and other nature objects.

Terry Young and Melodee Michalares display a sample of the talent that can be found at Edgewood.

Home Ec. Adds Advanced Course

The Faculty enjoyed the Christmas tea given by the "Sweet Ten" Home Ec. class.

Mrs. Bailey's, Mrs. Helton's, and Mrs. Puglisi's home economics students learned from practical experience about cooking, sewing, and making a home. They were taught everything from how to shop for a family to how to plan a house.

When the Boys' foods class put baking soda in their muffins instead of baking powder, the muffins turned green and fell. This incident confirmed the real need for a boys' home economics class; however, they didn't do everything wrong. Together the boys prepared a special Christmas dinner, which turned out to be very delicious.

The most advanced class and a new addition this year, home economics IV experimented with foreign foods and learned expert tailoring techniques. Some very surprised teachers were invited to sit with the girls and try out foods from any country they chose. Those who were not invited were not left out, for all the other teachers who didn't get invited to the dinner enjoyed a tea with the talented hostesses.

Debbie Arthur's main concern is to cut on the solid black line.

Mrs. Carter from Public Service demonstrates the latest in electronic kitchen appliances to the Boys Foods class.

Fields Expanded in Industrial Arts

Auto mechanics and Metals I and II have a variety of activities. Guided by Mr. Overholser, students learn things so diversified as building mini bikes, making tools with the lathe and mill, and welding a basketball to a piece of opp art.

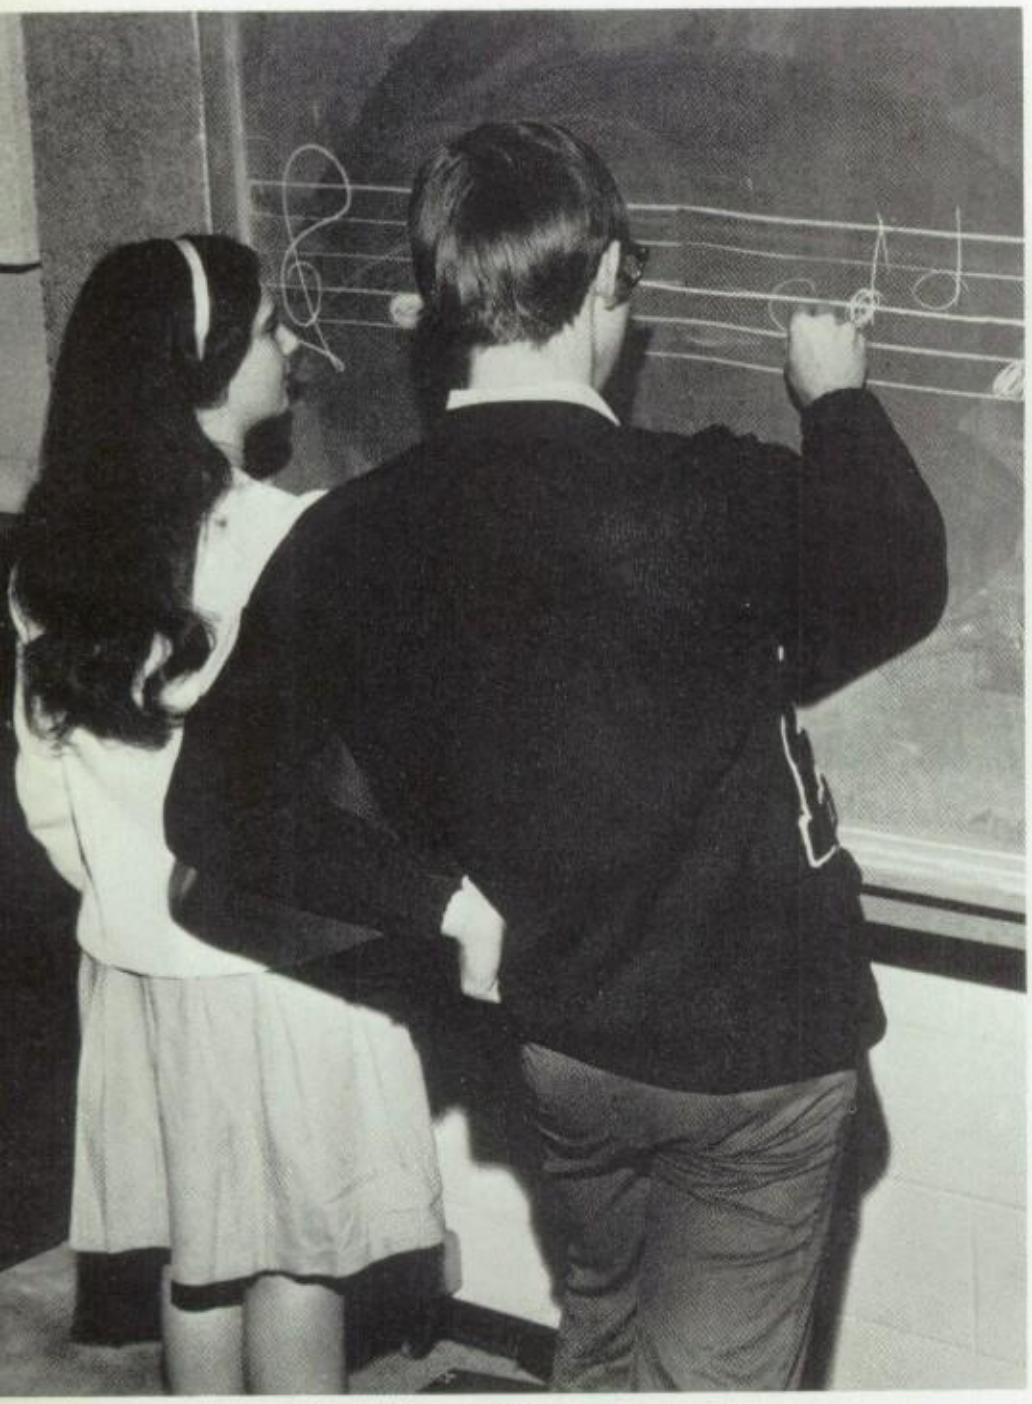
General Shop with Mr. Anderson teaches the fundamentals to more specialized work in Drafting I and II and Woods I and II. Boys learned in Drafting how a house is built and how to make working drawing. Woods illustrated the beauty which can be brought out in a piece of walnut or oak to create such lovely items as letter openers and jewelry chests.

Carl Landis explores the use of the drill press.

David Webb and John Hopkins master skills in Industrial Arts.

John Mitchell and Jerry Bock learn how to use the complicated tools necessary for drafting.

Theory Added to Music Department



Note arrangement on the staff is worked with by Imogene Stalcup and Randy Nikirk.

Most Edgewood patrons see the music department in action, when the band marches at halftime and parades, or when the chorus presents annual Christmas programs or variety shows. There is much more than goes on in the music room throughout the day that these patrons never see.

The music room has no classes during the homeroom periods, yet every day there were indivduals and groups practicing in the rooms for performances and contests. Second period and third period, voices echoed down to the Superintendent's office, as the chorus practiced for convocations and concerts. Besides the singing, the chorus sold many boxes of candy to pay for new robes and music.

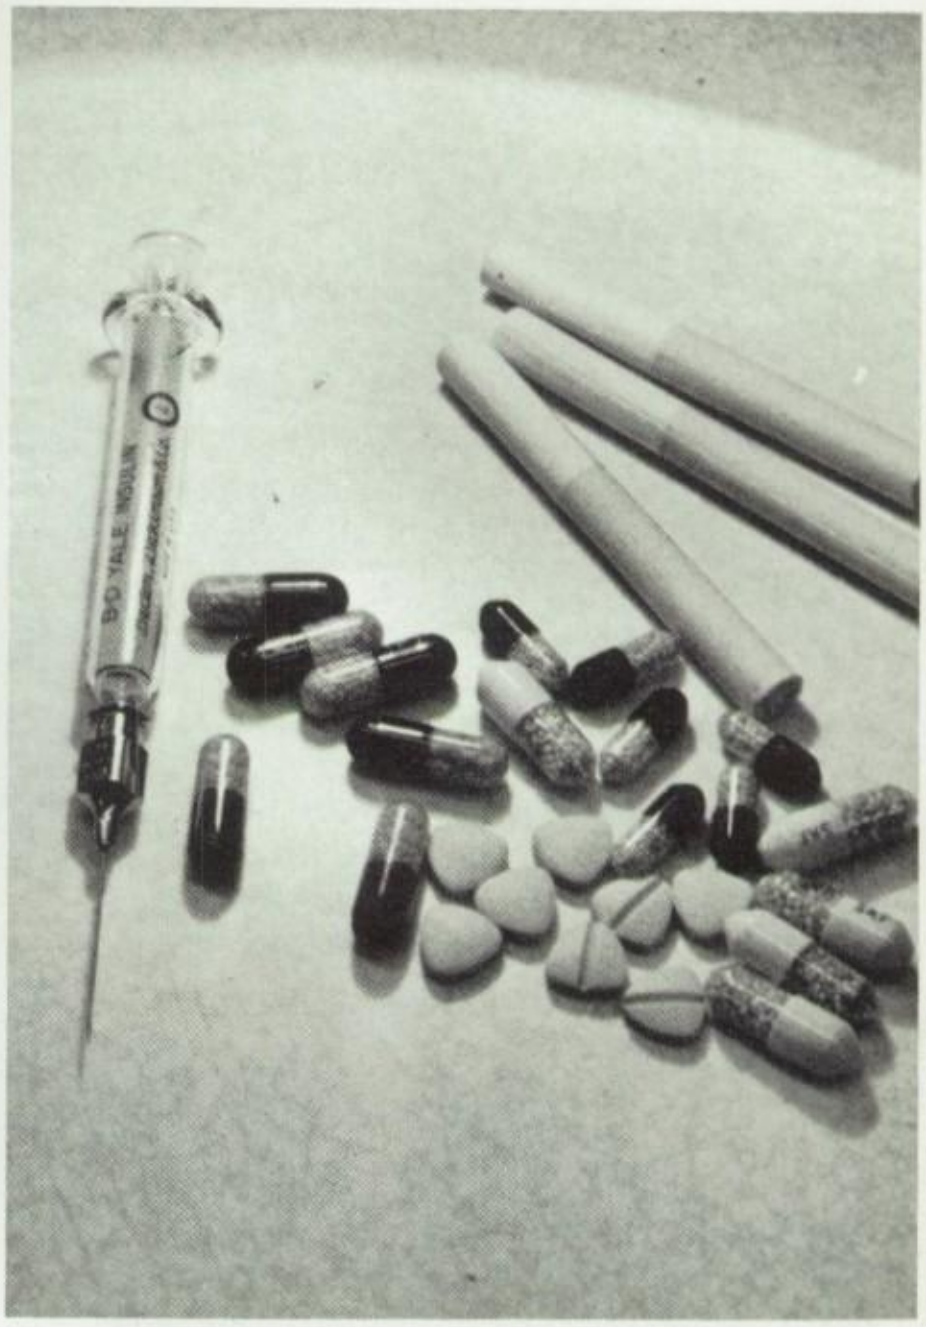
Fourth period Music Theory, a new addition to the curriculum this year, gave interested students the necessary background in scales construction, intervals, tatrachords, involved time signatures, and eventually harmony and arranging with transportation.

Fifth period the band practiced for its many parades, concerts, halftime shows, and came back from the district solo and ensemble contest with three first place groups.

Mr. Row gives last minute instructions before the band proceeds to line up.

Music Theory students pick out the song which they will study.

Jan Masters finds that she must keep in step to the bamboo sticks.



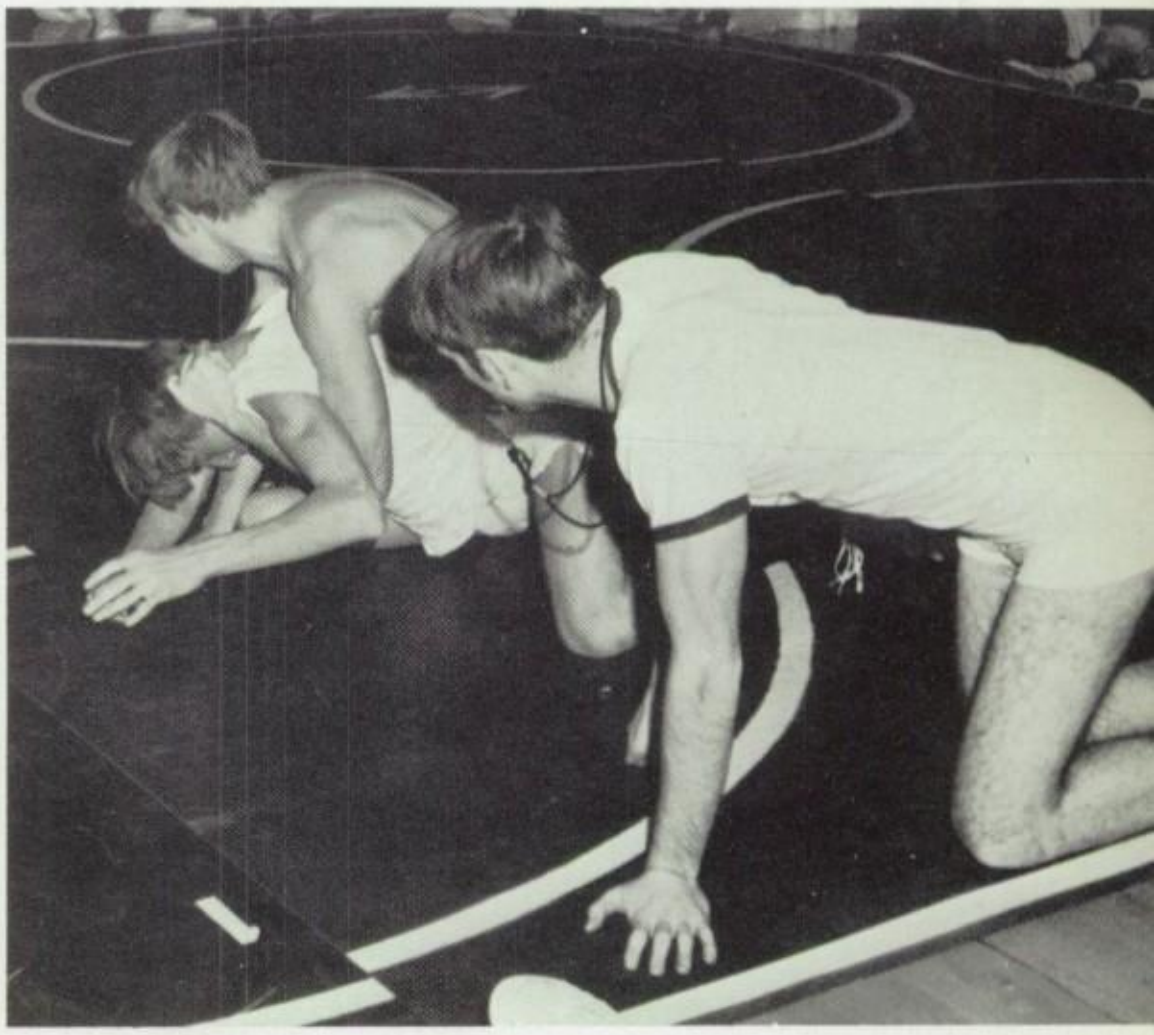
Drugs and addiction was the topic for the State Police's program for all Edgewood students.

Students Set Goal at Fitness Award

Marijuana, LSD, and speed were just a few of the drugs that were heard in teen jargon this year. The moral values of drugs, and pros and cons about laws and legislation were a few of the discussions that occurred in the health classes. To help students understand drug hazards, members of the state police came to E.H.S. to show a film concerning drug usage and its affects on the body. The film was shown not only to the health classes, but to the student body.

Drugs, of course, were not the only topic of discussion in health classes. The year gave students an opportunity to study the various systems of the human body, and how to care for them.

Meanwhile, physical education classes gave the underclassmen a chance to develop their own physical fitness in sports ranging from wrestling for boys to gymnastics for girls. To make the endeavor even more worthwhile, the hope of obtaining a Presidential Physical Fitness Award was an added incentive.



Boy's Physical Education classes learn wrestling holds.

Activities

Not long ago, staying after school meant a student was being punished for bad behavior in the classroom. For Edgewood's young enthusiasts, it meant club meetings, activity work sessions, rehearsals, and fund raising planning. Activities were rarely left to just after school time, however. Before school, during homeroom, lunch hours, and activity periods; all these boomed with meetings, planning sessions, and brain storming. Weekly activity periods with pep sessions, convocations, plays, and powder puff games supplemented club meetings. Not even evenings were free from student enthusiasm for games, dances, and parties.

Activities ranged from working on yearbooks, collecting gifts for Vietnam service men, rehearsing for performances, and just talking with fellow homeroom students who happened to be free for the afternoon. Money raising projects were a necessity for the plans to be carried out, and students sold cookies, candy, candles, and concessions at the basketball games. Doing things for their own particular group, or doing things for others through their activities, Edgewood students put their leisure time to productive action, making the school hum with the constant commotion of their work.

Chorus Plans and Present

Voices echoing down the hall to the superintendent's office were not the only evidences that the chorus was at work. For the Thanksgiving and Christmas convocations, the chorus provided musical numbers for the student body. The chorus's performing talents were not limited to only the student body, however, for the annual spring variety show is a chorus production. While the chorus took only a small portion of the entire performing time, they were responsible for recruiting acts, screening them, painting scenery, working the lighting and the curtains, directing, selling advance tickets, designing programs, and even providing refreshments for the intermission.

With the proceeds from this venture, along with the profits from the annual candy sale, new robes and music were purchased, plus extra stage equipment for future use by other choruses.

During the week prior to October 16, eight new members were inducted into the National Honor Society.

Members were chosen for their Scholarship, leadership, character, and service. These four characteristics guided the activities planned.

Edgewood graduates returned to give seniors advice on registration, note taking, studying, professors, and student activities in college.

In February, members traveled to the two elementary schools and the Jr. High to conduct the annual N.H.S. spelling bee. Plans were made for the initiation of junior members in the spring, and for an orientation day for the eighth grade.

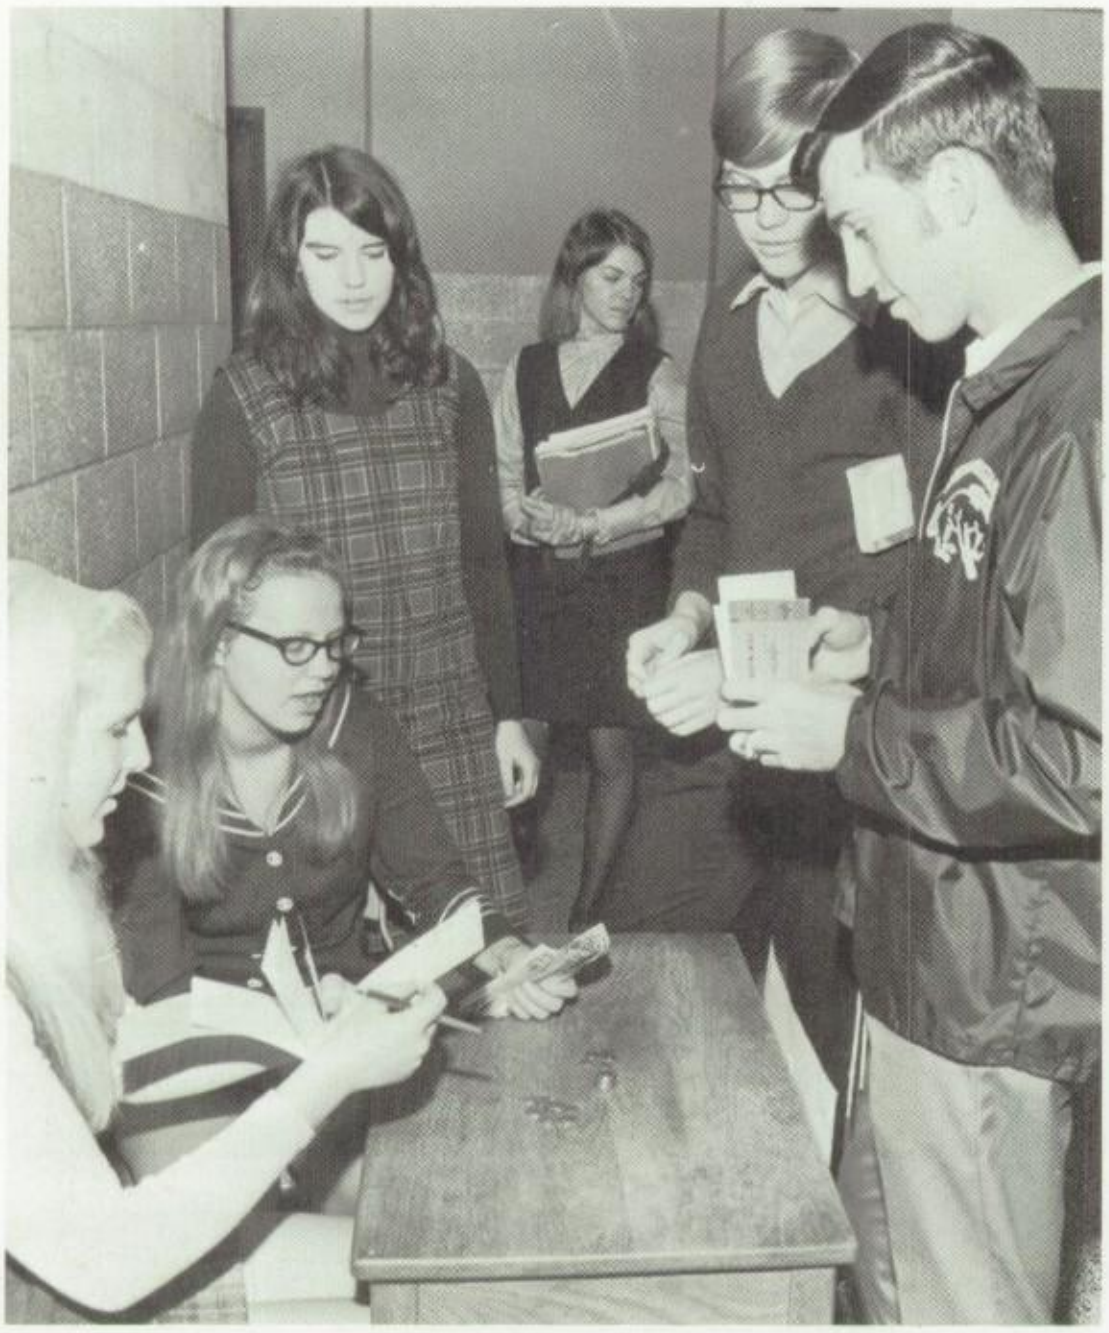
Deadlines, Overdue Copy, and Long Hours



Staff members Sheona and Carol kick off fall subscription drive.

Little thought is given to the yearbook staff except on days when pictures are being taken and, of course, on the day of the yearbook's arrival. Much more, however, goes on behind the scenes than the students may realize.

For example, as soon as the '70 edition of the El Corral is delivered and the senior staff members breath a little easier, the junior members begin to plan how the next edition will be put together. With these ideas in mind; two yearbook staff members are sent off to the Indiana University Journalism Institute for Yearbook editors. Once back home the entire staff gets together to sell ads. This job of raising $2,000 must be done during the summer months.

The job of planning layouts, cropping pictures, and being at the mercy of the photographers are only small parts of the many tasks that must be done, and all of this is done after school and in the wee hours of the morning.

If all goes well, the goal of the staff—to produce the best yearbook yet—is reached.

Sports

A faithful pep block, a senior boys' pep block, bands, fan buses, and sore throats all resulted when Edgewood released its sports enthusiasm. Whether it was a rainy, cold, sloshy football battle or a double overtime basketball tournament, cheerleaders led fans in yells, chants, and songs. Even before game time, posters in the halls and pep sessions last period kept spirit high. A race between a Mustang and a Cougar plus pie-in-the-face comedy are examples of just a few spirit-raising skits pioneered by the cheerleaders.

Laps up and down gym stairs, after school work-outs, and exhausted muscles lay in wait for athletes. New coaches Steve Redenbaugh, Jim Weber, and Garry Anderson put their skills to work molding golfers, wrestlers, runners, batters, jumpers, tacklers, blockers, and dribblers for the 1969-70 season, a season with no end, stretching from summer baseball to spring track. Edgewood athletes emerged, ready for the action, tests, and victories from the young.

Football Team Is Best Yet

On a slow but steady rise, the Mustang Varsity Football team completed its best season yet. Backed by Head Coach Dick Ricker, the Mustang squad compiled a 4-5-1 record, missing a winning season by only one game. Tying the opener against Brownstown 0 to 0, the gridiron squad went on to win four games against Greencastle, Mitchell, North Central, and Edinburg, interrupted by defeats by University and Dugger. The high game of the season came against Edinburg on the home field, defeating the vistors 37 to 7. The Mustangs pulled through with the spirit of Quarterback Mike Scaggs, aided by Co-captains Rick Nielsen and Robbie Taylor. Although the season concluded with a three game losing streak, the last a mud spattered loss to Springs Valley, 12 lettermen will return to next year's team.

Season Wrap-Up

After the first games of the season, fans and critics agreed that Edgewood's net squad was in a slump, a slump that lasted for ten straight games before the team tasted victory for the first time this year on foreign Eastern hardwood. Improving and learning, the team dribbled, rebounded, and shot their way through four more defeats before winning a spectacular 105 to 77 win over Monrovia, back on native soil. Fans went wild as the score reached 98 with a 2-shot free throw chance. Hitting one out of two, the crowd screamed until a field goal pushed the score up and over the one hundred mark. A single basket prevented another Mustang win, as Cloverdale edged past 96 to 94. Loyal patrons and hysterical fans urged the hardwood athletes on to win the last scheduled game of the season against Mooresville in a sound 86 to 55 defeat at home.

Crowds Grow as Wrestlers Win

The largest team in Edgewood's history completed their second winning season with a 7-4 record. These boys dieted and ate before meets to meet their weight qualifications, often running miles around the gym in last minute efforts to reduce the remaining couple of pounds before the night of the match. Sprained muscles, growling stomachs, and support from the fans were the important factors in the team's success.

Growing crowds reflected a growing interest in wrestling. With a winning season, fans came to watch. Where before at this time of year talk centered about basketball fouls and shots, there was additional talk of pins, decisions, and holds. For the first time, a fan bus followed the team to meets at other schools.

Not all was work for the wrestlers, however. After meets there were feasts and jokes, while the nearly starving grapplers ate what they dieted off the day before.

Five Gymnasts Go to State Meet

Sore muscles, sprained and broken bodies, tension, and many hours of work go into the production of a girls' gymnastic team as busy as the one at Edgewood. Participating in competition, girls did advanced stunts on the side horse, uneven parallel bars, balance beam, and in free exercise.

Besides competition, these girls also presented halftime shows and convocations. On February 6, the student body watched in awe as the team gracefully completed difficult manuevers on the apparatus. The silence in the gym grew steadily as the girls demonstrated their coordination and training, later to accept a thundering applause of appreciation from the crowd. Half times at basketball games were also scenes for exhibition. The February 20 halftime show climaxed the exhibition, for the following day Edgewood hosted the district gymnastics meet. Five girls placed in the top 3 in their divisions, and went on to the state meet in Munster.

Administration and Faculty

Students at Edgewood this year found a whole new host of faces behind the classroom teacher's desks. New faculty members filled positions as coaches, department heads, and club sponsors. Not even the principal's position was left out, as Thomas McConnell filled that administration spot for the 1969-70 school term. Teachers' meetings, paper grading, and test making were just a few of the more obvious duties for before and after school hours.

The obvious teachers' duties were only a small part of the work load carried. Faculty and administration members radiated their school spirit by rallying for athletic teams, offering their own talents in the form of sponsoring clubs, directing groups, and lending a helping hand to a confused student before test time.

Few students realize it, but many of the teachers are students, too. Working for Master's degrees and above, they take evening courses at Indiana University in addition to their teaching duties. In this way, they can see both a student's and a teacher's view of school and its work.

Janitors and Cooks Serve Student Needs

The custodians at Edgewood High School strived diligently to maintain a high standard of cleanliness and sanitation. Throughout the year they were busy sweeping, shoveling, dusting, mopping, and waxing in an attempt to counteract the continual onslaught of dirt and untidiness that was a by-product of daily student activities.

In addition to those jobs, the custodians were kept busy with other tasks. After the excitement of E.H.S.'s basketball games, wrestling matches, and gymnastics meets, they faced the tedious job of cleaning and sweeping the popcorn split and coke splattered gymnasium.

Seniors

Though the class motto was "Today we follow: Tomorrow we lead," the seniors of '70 began leading as soon as school resumed in September. Breaking tradition, seniors chose white robes for graduation instead of dark. The first class to be involved in the Distributive Education course, many left school at noon to their jobs, while cadet teachers waited until second period to come from their elementary and junior high school posts. With Time in every locker, seniors knew and cared about world events, and many times government class turned into hot debates about Vietnam, the lottery system, and the electoral college. College, jobs, and future plans were given serious thought, but not so serious that seniors could not add a few more notches to the spirit stick, while the senior boys' pep block kept up spirited support for the basketball games. "How many announcements do I need?" and "Sorry, I have to order more pictures" gave way to "What shall I wear to the prom?" and "Please don't step on my robe" as May swept past in a flurry of finals, proms, senior keys, white roses, and Pomp and Circumstance.

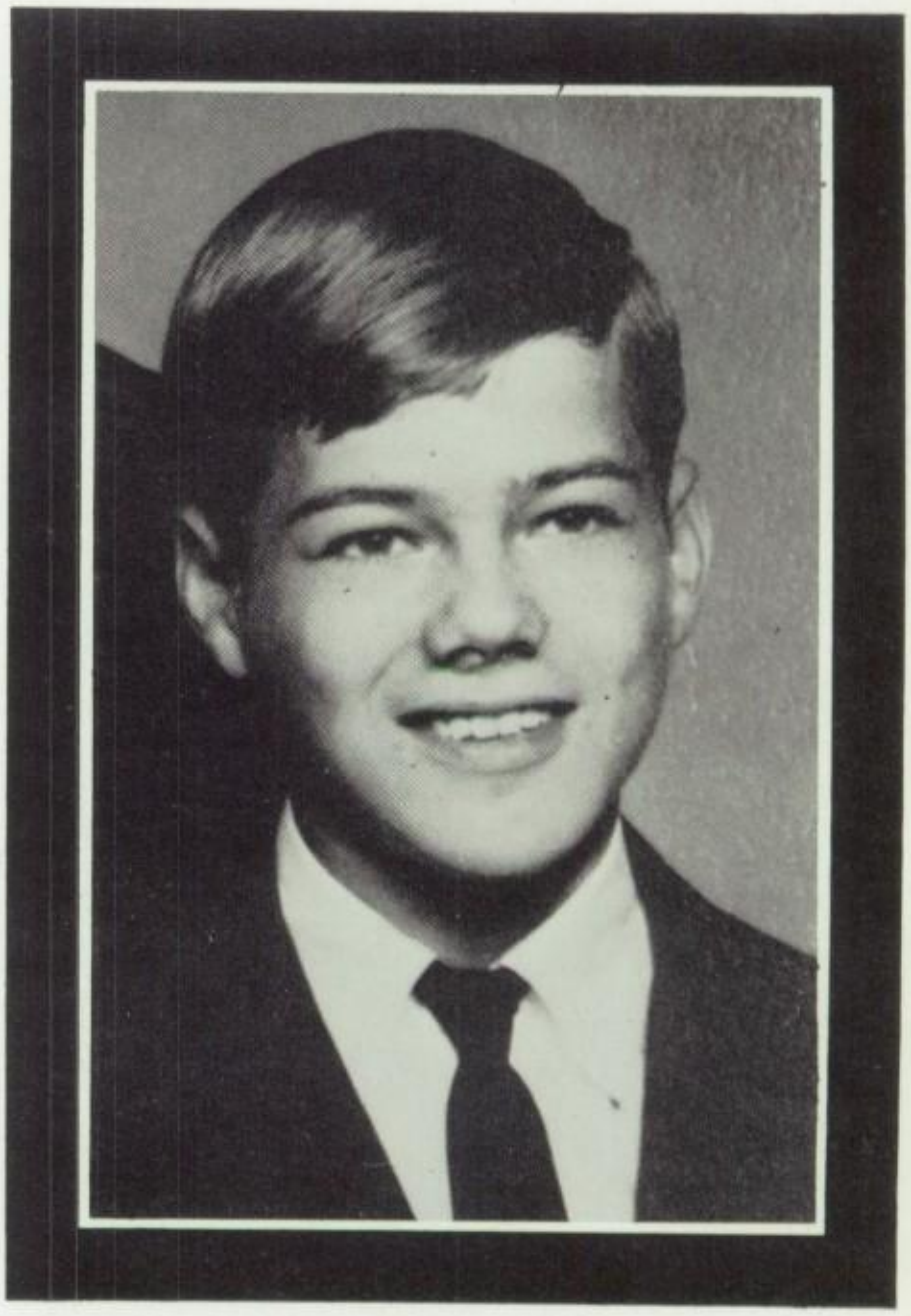
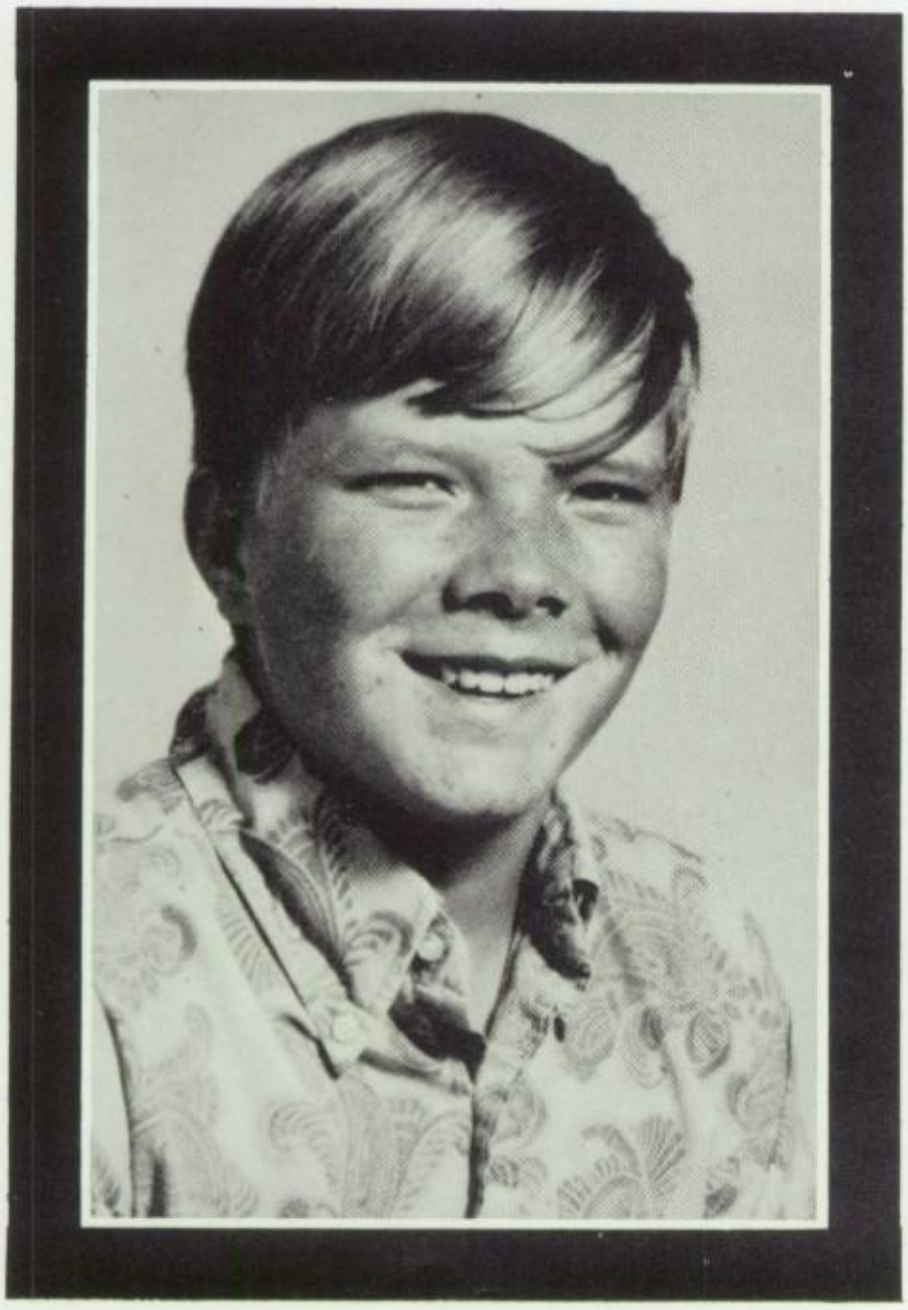
Class of '70 Salutes



JERRY DEAN BUSHNELL
November 29, 1951-March 4, 1968

Jerry, in his years at Edgewood High School, was a vivacious, nature loving person, as shown by his enthusiasm for his 4-H projects, farming, and working with the 4-H Beef Club. Manager of the Varsity basketball squad, he also loved tinkering with mechanical objects, putting and taking apart anything that would work. The Ellettsville Baptist Church was a familiar place to him, and he had a quick and easy smile for anyone who would stop and talk after services.



DENNIS EARL SEARS
July 9, 1952-October 1, 1969

The class of 1970 lost a fine student and great friend with Dennis Sears. A quiet person, one would hardly have known Dennis to be there if it weren't for his impish smile and jolly disposition. While Dennis had many friends, he enjoyed having time to himself to be alone piddling with screwdrivers, wrenches, nuts, and bolts, or anything mechanical in nature. A member of the Bloomington Assembly of God Church, his friends and neighbors will remember this warm personality to be one of the best kinds of people.

EDGEWOOD HIGH

HOF

Underclassmen

Each of the separate classes at Edgewood this year had something of its own that distinguished it from the classes before it.

The Freshman class was the largest yet to start their high school at Edgewood. Besides being the biggest, they were also the last of the classes from two different junior high schools to be combined in the first year of high school. With the new junior high completed, the Stinesville and Ellettsville classes will be combined at the sixth grade level.

Sophomores broke a standing tradition that has been followed by every class that has chosen class rings when they decided to receive their rings as sophomores. Ordering their rings in the fall, the class of '72 received their rings in time to show them off the summer before their junior year.

The juniors while not breaking tradition started one. They were responsible for the designing of a custom school ring, one that was designed especially for Edgewood. With magazine sales and prom plans for May, the Junior class anticipated their role as seniors in 1971.

Each class, with its own credits and ideas, look to the day when they reach the top of the academic ladder. When they can look down from their lofty perches to reflect on their high school days of dances, parties, proms, and classes.

"They're Climbing Up the Ladder Rung by Rung . . ."

Edgewood Buyers' Guide

Edgewood teens are right in step with the world around them. They like mini-skirts, long hair, bell bottoms, vests, and rock music. To express his individual, young ideas, Edgewood area merchants have developed Junior departments, psychedelic signs, and with it fashions catering to the young public. Their advertising, displays, and sales talks are aimed at today's youth, and the purchasing power of the teen continues to rise.

Included in this guide are stores that want young patrons and have new ideas. They are places for the teens to go, to shop, and to be himself. Clothing, cars, pizza, bowling; anything that he needs is included, for his own needs and that of his family. The young are coming into their own in the marketing world, and Edgewood is right with them.

Your Yearbook is Best Because—

It is your keepsake of Edgewood, your friends, your class, and your year. It is packed with all the things that you will remember and treasure.

Taylor Publishing Company sees to it that your book is made to withstand the stresses of friends signing, falling out of lockers, and numerous thumbings. The print is clean and readable, even when you start wearing bifocals. The pictures are sharp and do nothing to distort your memories.

Taylor does all it can to present the content in a clear, concise, and durable book. If you want to know how, ask Rex Moonshower, Taylor representative for this area. He knows his business.

Congratulations From

DAILY HERALD TELEPHONE SUNDAY HERALD TIMES

Just a few years ago this newspaper had the privilege of publishing the happy news of your birth. Since then, we have reported the activities of your family, your school, your church, your community, and have kept you informed on our state, nation, and world. Serious, yes, but with a dash of humor and good fun!

Now you are joining the adult world of our "subscribers". We shall have the pleasure of announcing sometime in the future of your marriage, and honors you earn as good citizens.

This newspaper . . . your newspaper . . . is, and will continue to be, a good, reliable and dependable friend and servant.
